Sculptures recovered

A typewritten note slipped under the door of Student Activities Director Tom Kelly alerted the Sacred Heart University Security Department to the location of "Early Spring," the second of two Lee Tribe sculptures that disappeared from the campus courtyard Monday night, Feb. 18. The sculptures were part of Lee Tribe's welded-steel sculpture exhibit on display at the Gallery of Contemporary Art at Sacred Heart University.

The outside of the envelope, which was found Monday morning, read: "Whoever opens this letter will find directions to the Lee Tribe sculpture." The contents of the letter revealed directions to the Knights of Columbus Hall on Park Avenue in Bridgeport where the sculpture was found 20 feet down a path behind the K of C parking lot. Robert Daloia, acting director of the Sacred Heart University Security Department, located the piece, then notified Bridgeport police of the finding.

Several members of the campus community have speculated that the art was taken as a prank. There is no available evidence to verify this speculation.

"I have no information that would lead me to believe that a fraternity or sorority would have something to do with it, and if that were to turn out to be the case I would be disappointed, indeed," stated Kelly.

"Early Spring" and "Rooster," valued at $10,000 and $7,500 respectively, were reported missing from the campus courtyard 10:55 p.m. Monday, Feb. 18. "Rooster," the smaller of the two pieces at 50 by 40 inches and 2 1/2-feet tall, was recovered Thursday, Feb. 21,

China lecture slated

By Dean Connors

On Tuesday, March 5, Sacred Heart will host Dr. Andrew J. Nathan for a public lecture, on the movement for democracy in China, in Schine Auditorium at 7:00 p.m.

Nathan is a professor of political science at Columbia University who has earned an international reputation as a specialist on modern Chinese politics.

Dr. Thomas Curran, faculty of humanistic studies, said "Nathan's expertise lies in the history of China's struggle for democracy (he has written three books on the subject), but he approaches that subject with a solid understanding of the intellectual foundations of democracy and constitutional government in the West."

"He is a China scholar whose competence reaches far beyond the China field, and I believe that one not need to be careful student of China to appreciate the signifi-

Third World changes addressed

By Charo Leigh Clark

As part of The Honors Lecture Series on Tuesday, February 19th at 11:00 a.m. in S202B, Dr. Thomas Trebon spoke on Issues Of Political and Social Changes In The "Third World".

Dr. Trebon, Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost, has earned his Doctorate in International Studies, majoring in politics and economics.

Dr. Thomas Trebon

He did research work in East Africa for a year, and taught full-time for 15 years.

He welcomed the opportunity to lecture to the Sacred Heart Community.

"I was very pleased to be included and invited," said Trebon. "It was a good opportunity to dig back into some key academic areas I have been away from as a result of my administrative duties."

In his lecture, Dr. Trebon presented the characteristics which distinguish Third World nations from the First and Second World nations, along with the social, economic, and political issues concerning these nations and their development.

The issues concerning political and social change of these nations, which Dr. Trebon found most important are, the issues of:

nation building, identity and stability, independence, and economic development.

Dr. Trebon addressed the question of mobilizing third world populations (with reference to Africa), which have great ethnic diversity, toward national goals.

"There are many states of the third world where any sense of national identity is absent, or at least absent among the vast majority of the population," said Trebon. "That is due to the absence of many of the factors held in common which promote a sense of identity as a people."

Trebon added, "One's identity as a person is first and foremost tied to one's immediate cultural group, village or

SETS helps Fairfield Police Union with Operation Desert Support

By Funda Alp

The SETS coalition has joined forces with the Fairfield Police Union in "OPERATION DESERT SUPPORT", a donation drive of in-demand items for the troops fighting in the Gulf War.

"A member of the F.P.U. came to see us, told us about OPERATION DESERT SUPPORT and showed us a list of everyday items desperately needed by the troops. We told him about SETS and our goals decided it was a great way to show our support," says Alice Chaves, co-founder of SETS.

The donation drive is dependent on the support of Sacred Heart student organizations. "We gathered a list of student organizations and randomly picked an item for each organization to donate," said Kate Keegan, SETS co-founder, "and the response has been tremendous."

Some of the organizations that have already confirmed their support are Beta Delta Phi, Sigma Tau Omega, Italian Club, Nu

Episilon Omega and Spectrum.

Some of the 22 items that will be donated to OPERATION DESERT SUPPORT include: toothbrushes, deodorant, sunscreen, stationary, powdered juice mix, chapstick and socks. These items are not supplied by the military or not supplied in sufficient

Laughter, the best medicine

By Sarah Gauthier

Last Thursday approximately 130 students turned out at the cafeteria for a free comedy event "We Can Make You Laugh" sponsored by the Student Activities office.

The first segment of the show was a stand up comedy "warm up" in which three comedians performed for twenty minutes each.

Two new comedians, George Carta (New York) and Kernet

Apio (Hawaii) joined the comedy program this semester. Andre Kelley has been touring with the show for the past year and a half.

For the second half of the show, three volunteer student judges (Todd Williams, Linda Manna and Marina Digiorio) were given the task of determining whether or not contestants cracked a smile or laughed.

The contestants that had volunteered for the show were randomly

Study: The rape rate is decreasing

(CPS) - The rate of attempted rapes of females fell 46 percent from 1973 to 1987, the federal Bureau of Federal Statistics said recently.

In 1973, 1.3 out of every 1,000 females in the country were victims of attempted rape. In 1987, the rate had fallen to 0.7 females out of 1,000.

But women between the ages of 16 and 24 were three times more likely to be rape victims than women of other ages.

clan, and the issue of national identity is wrought with struggle based on inter-ethnic conflict over land, religious values, or political power."

Some of the hardships these nations are dealing with are: hunger, malnutrition, over-populated cities, mass unemployment, large amounts of debt, and severe poverty.

Concerning the problems of these nations he pointed out two opposing approaches.

"It is of the nature of the West to want to tackle and solve each of these problems quickly," said Trebon.

"Perhaps we need to consider that the very desire for rapid and complete solutions, designed by us and funded by us, may be in fact part of the problem," said Trebon.

Trebon said, "Another approach based on their experience of the harshness of the environment may be more practical, although not very hopeful. It is summed up in a key Swahili phrase 'little by little fills the pot'."

Dr. Trebon looks forward to the opportunity to do another lecture. "It is good to be back with the exchange of faculty and student in that environment," said Trebon. "I would like to do it again in a setting where there is more interchange."

First Selectman of Trumbull Speaks at SHU

By Dean Connors

David Wilson, first selectman of Trumbull, came to speak at Sacred Heart University Tuesday, Feb. 19 at 11:00 a.m. The Criminal Justice Club presented this event that took place in room S217.

Wilson lived in Trumbull all of his life. He attended high school, got married and joined the police force there.

At age thirty he started college and went on to be an instructor of law at SHU.

Wilson worked for 26 years on the police force making it to captain, but wanted to be chief of police.

"They had a choice between me and another fellow and they picked the other fellow," said Wilson. "So I ran for First Selectman and fired all those people who chose the other fellow."

Originally, he did not wish to run for the position, but a persistent Democratic party wanted to nominate him and talked to him for three or four months.

Wilson finally came around.

He talked about opportunities in his life that he had turned down and how he wondered what might of came of them.

"I didn't want to find myself looking back and wondering what would have happened if I hadn't left the police department for this (First Selectman)," said Wilson.

Wilson did set out for First Selectman and thought that running for the position might be the change he was looking for.

"The first time out, you go on an image that's created by whom-ever and it's a personality contest. But after a term, you've got to go on your performance," said Wilson. "All I wanted to do was perform well."

With election comes some short comings.

Wilson said that "the big hang up" with politicians is in decision making. He said that you have to worry about what the party and the people are going to think of you.

"And both (party and people) relate to: Can I be re-elected?" said Wilson.

But Wilson stated that he didn't have to worry about job security and added that his main concern was to please the people that work for him.

"Not that I don't care about the public, but you have your shot at me every other year," said Wilson. "If you like what's done, put me in and if you don't like what's done it's your duty to pull me out."

Wilson said, "I can live with that because I'm on a leave of absence from the police department and they have to give me my job back as captain with the same seniority and pay."

This is so because of a law similar to the one that allows men and women serve the country and have their jobs secured until their arrival.

"Any municipal employee who is elected to a full time political office can serve two terms or four years and has to be returned to their seniority position," said Wilson.

He then added, "The interesting part about that, in terms of four years, is a little attachment on the bottom saying that the higher authority may change that if they want, and I'm the higher authority."

First Selectman is not something that Wilson wants to do for a living.

"I don't intend to get involved for more than two terms, but if in November they say I'm done... I'll walk away saying that I did it my way," said Wilson.

A couple of students questioned him about whether or not he thought it was fair to keep the position of police captain locked up from others to advance themselves.

Answering he said, "It becomes a question of do I want to make him happy, her happy or me?"

Wilson stated then that it was unlikely that he would return back to the job of police captain. In fact he may get rid of that position as well as another of three captain positions in the police force.

Debate on Persian Gulf War continues

By Shellie Dagoo

While the ground war rages on the Middle East front lines, debate on whether or not it was avoidable is as heated as the battle itself.

The war was unavoidable, said associate professor of political science John Kikoski.

"We are a moral nation," Kikoski said. "We had no choice."

He said if the U.S. had waited for economic sanctions to work, we would have jeopardized the unity of the coalition and would have been forced to keep our troops in the Gulf for more than a year.

"It would be sad if Bush lost support for the war," Kikoski said. "His support depends on the rate of casualties."

The U.S. wants a quick war with minimum casualties, he continued. Undoubtedly the U.S. will win.

"Do we want a man as cruel as Sadaam Hussein to make the rules for the Middle East - to determine oil prices?" Kikoski said. "Imagine paying $5 per gallon."

If the war ends quickly, it will probably be a spur to the economy, he said. But if it becomes long-term, it will drag the economy down.

This war could have been avoided if the West had taken the Arab League more seriously, said assistant professor of History John Roney.

"I would like to see an Arab solution to this problem," Roney said. "It doesn't resolve anything when outsiders decide how to solve a region's problems."

The U.S. supported and armed Iraq for eight years during the Iran-Iraq war.

"Now he's turned on us," Roney said. "I guess we got caught in our own game."

The U.S. should have played an advisory role instead of taking the lead, Roney said.

Once the U.S. became embroiled in the Middle East, Sadaam Hussein suddenly became a hero in the Arab world, Roney said. Once he is removed, even the Arab countries in the coalition will be deeply anti-American for years to come.

Roney said even though the causes of the war are deep-seated, it was avoidable.

Under U.S. guidance, Kuwait violated OPEC quotas by dumping oil on the world market, Roney said. Of course this benefitted the U.S.

Whenever the U.S. says jump, we expect the leaders of other governments to be pliable, Roney said.

"The U.S. is seeking a short-term solution, and many times there aren't any. It's short-term when you use (military) force."

"I don't believe that all wars are unjustified," Roney said. "But when one is meddling in the affairs of others, one is obviously running a big risk."

"To resolve any conflict, we have to have all parties involved come up with a solution and implement it," Roney said. "But when George Bush gives his opinion, it's so righteous, so moral. There's no hint that he may be wrong."

One of Sadaam Hussein's goals is to turn this war into an Islamic jihad, said Kikoski.

He's appealing to Arab nationalism, Roney said. Sadaam is a descendant of an ancient Mesopotamian civilization.

The borders that exist in the Middle East were created by non-Arab colonial powers, Roney said. Iraq was denied access to the Gulf of Aquaba.

"Ideally, Christians and Muslims should be able to sit down and talk things over," Roney said. "But this conflict shouldn't surprise us. If the Catholics and Protestants can't get along in Northern Ireland..."

Leap of faith

Faith: the religious rely on it: marriages are built on it, it is synonymous with trust.

When people have faith, it can move mountains. But when people lose faith, it is most difficult to regain.

Artist and sculptor, Lee Tribe, allowed a collection of his works to be displayed in and outside of the Plohn Gallery, trusting, in good faith, that SHU would be a welcome and safe haven for these sculptures.

Yet, the unfortunate circumstance that befell the two sculptures displayed in the courtyard must surely go a long way towards destroying that faith. It matters little that both sculptures have been recovered; his faith in this university has been eroded.

Due to the actions of the perpetrator(s), the University, and the art gallery in particular, have lost face in the community because the community has lost faith in SHU.

The return of the sculptures (both under anonymous circumstances) is only a first step to righting this wrong. But it may not be enough. The university may never fully recover from this action and that is unfortunate.

It is unfortunate because solely on account of what is looking more and more like a prank, people who might have once considered loaning pieces of art to SHU, will think long and hard before making that leap of faith now.

A promise kept

The annual debut of the Prologue Yearbook has finally arrived.

After many problems and delays, the editors of the Prologue have unveiled a book which, as promised, students can be proud of.

The delays, we were told, were necessary to ensure a quality product, and a quality product we have.

The hard work and efforts of the few people who were truly dedicated to the Prologue should be noted. Cheryl Pierne and Kristen Wittmer, among other staffers should be proud of their achievement.

We at the Spectrum are well aware of how important it is to have dedicated people involved in a project and would like to acknowledge them and give them the recognition they deserve.

Congratulations to all.

Observations from Beyond

By J. Broad

Recently my younger brother and I attempted to explain to my mother and father the various subtleties of the labels system for naming high school/college romances. You see, to my parents, you are either "going steady" with someone or you aren't. They were thoroughly mystified by the seemingly arbitrary gray areas of being friends with someone, dating someone, seeing someone, and going out with someone. Summarized below are the various levels of commitment that my brother and I came up with (full transcripts of the actual conversation are available at a nominal fee.)

PLEASE NOTE: the opinions expressed in the following column are not necessarily those of the author, but are based upon informal surveys and observations of others.

Friends - aka "the nasty f-word." This term is frequently employed to either a) prevent the beginning of a relationship or b) facilitate the end of a relationship. In the first case, the context usually points out how "good" the friendship is and how attempting to start a relationship might "ruin" it. In nearly every case in recorded history where men and women have attempted to be platonic friends, this precease-fire has been negotiated or at least discussed. If both sides agree, then the real friendship can begin. If one side resists, then either someone has to change their feelings or the friendship will end entirely. My best friend, whose female, and I negotiated a truce in this manner! In the case of facillitating the end of a relationship, I'm sure we've all gotten (or given) the "Let's be friends..." speech, which is better for all concerned if you mean it. This level frequently follows a downgrade from going out to seeing each other.

Dating - see also: "playing the field." this is seeing each other people who are really bad with, or really scared of, any type commitment. Dating is sort or like renting with a option to buy. It is most often used as a trial period before the decision is made to go out or be with friends. "Dates" are prearranged and one partner must specifically invite the other. Assuming or speaking for the other partner usually results in immediate banishment to the friend level. There really is no formal commitment at this level, and both partners are free to see whomever else they choose. In some northern subculture, "engaged" is used as a synonym for this level of commitment (see the next installment of this column for a more formal definition of engagement.)

Seeing each other - my personal favorite because it thoroughly confuses me. This seems to be going out with a cheating option minus the guilt parameter. The parties are somewhat committed to each other, but if something better comes along, they are free to investigate without feeling guilty or breaking up. This level seldom lasts and is most usually used as a stepping stone from going out to friends or enemies (see friends option b.)

Going out - the 90s equivalent of "going steady." This level of commitment makes both partners feel secure secure enough to take each other for granted. Guilt and conscience are the primary factors designed to promote fidelity and harmony. If one partner wishes to see someone else, they are required by law to "break up" with their partner (break up is the teenage equivalent of a divorce without common property.) If you have no conscience, then you don't have to break up, you just have to not get caught (see dating above.)

Well, those are levels of commitment that my brother and I came up with during the course of our discussion. Please feel free to use them as a reference the next time you and the object of your affection have that "where are we" talk. They make not be the most complete definitions, and they may be a bit cynical, but at least you'll both be stuttering the same language.

I think the university support was considerable. There were many different aspects (of Black History) covered that were interesting for everybody. Turn out for most of the events seemed pretty good.

It was okay. I only went to one event—the Gospel Choir night. I should have supported it more, (but overall) it was supported well.

Less night classes, please

To the Editor,

Over the past two semesters Sacred Heart's catalog of classes continued to increase the number of night courses while decreasing the number and variety of day classes. If this trend continues, it could spell doom for a school yearning to attract a greater population of young college students.

Many required courses for certain majors are only offered at night. For instance, the "Data Structures" course required for all computer science majors and minors is only offered once a semester, at night. Many English literature courses are only offered at night. Almost all of the day media studies classes are electives; the required media courses are offered in the evening only.

How does a student who can't take night courses major in Computer Science, English or Media Studies? The answer is simple and quite well-known: transfer to another college. The answer is well-known because transferring out of SHU for a larger course selection is becoming a trend. I know several people who have already transferred out for this reason. I may do the same next semester.

Sacred Heart can not afford to lose day students. The administration wants to build dormitories to attract more young college students. Most young college students possess night jobs so they can have free mornings and afternoons for classes. Most young college students will need to keep these jobs to pay for school. Most young college students will not be able to, or will not want to take evening classes. Most young college students will not want to come to Sacred Heart University.

This is not a criticism, this is a prediction. In approximately three years, if the current night-class trend continues, Sacred Heart will be predominantly a night school. I won't be here to see it happen, for if the current trend continues, I will have transferred long before.

Don't offend me

To the Editor,

As the war drags on peace rallies are being held on many college campuses. If you are among those who choose to act on your belief for peace, please remember that your freedom shouldn't infringe on others.

An offensive action to many people is the burning of our American flag at peace rallies. The flag remains a symbol of our values, and freedom that soldiers have fought to preserve.

If you are involved in peace rallies, remember that our troops are protecting our freedom, and burning the flag is a slap in the face for them.

Before burning the flag ask yourself what message you really trying to relate.

Spring Break trips to su

by Joann R. Mariani
Features Editor

Birds aren't the only creatures that fly south for the winter. Every March and April, hundreds of thousands of college students migrate to warmer weather in a time-honored ritual called spring break. For some it's time to let loose and sunbathe, swim, and party until they drop. For others, it's a chance to quietly collapse after midterms and rejuvenate for the next few months. And for others it's just an opportunity to break away from the monotony of winter in New England and enjoy time with friends. Although Florida is the unofficial spring break capitol of the world, there is a wide range of locales to choose from, limited only by your resources and your imagination. Some suggestions follow: if you've already made plans for this break, it's not too early to begin planning for next year.

The traditional route

To most people, Florida is spring break. Daytona and Ft. Lauderdale play host to thousands of students who cram the beaches and bars. The year-round residents have a love-hate relationship with these migrants: they're loud and rowdy, but they leave behind a sizeable chunk of revenue.

All you really need for a typical spring break in Florida is a bottle of suntan lotion, a bathing suit, and a full cooler. But given Florida's temperamental weather, a hotel room is a nice amenity. Continental Airlines offer an attractive package to either Daytona or Ft. Lauderdale. $344.95 gets you round-trip airfare, accommodations at Days Inn, and an Alamo Rent-a-Car for three days. Beach sports and sunbathing are the basic components, so pack light. If you get tired of the beach, the Daytona Speedway and Cape Canaveral are nearby, and there are also facilities for golf and tennis, and in Ft. Lauderdale you can take one-day cruises. Local restaurants and bars are competing for your patronage, which makes for good pricing. If you're having too much fun to leave, extra nights are $21.00 per.

If you decide to visit the "vacation capital of the world", Orlando, you'll want to economize as much as possible on accommodations. USAir offers round-trip airfare and three days at the Comfort Inn Maingate in Orlando, on the verge of the Disney property, for $350.00. Entrance to the Magic Kingdom, EPCOT, and the MGM Studios can run upward of $90.00 for a two-day pass. If you have a bit more to spend, consider Delta's package that includes airfare, four nights at the Caribbean Beach Resort, rental car, and a 4-day unlimited pass to all three parks. It costs $679.00, but in the big picture is probably more economical than trying to put together a package a la carte. In addition to the three parks, the Disney property includes the water park, Typhoon Lagoon, sports facilities, shops, movies, and tons of fantastic restaurants with reasonable prices. As far as nightlife goes, Pleasure Island boasts six nightclubs including a contemporary dance club, a country-western, stand-up comedy and magic. If you decide to venture outside Disney territory, the possibilities are endless. Once again, don't load yourself down with luggage—the Orlando Airport is BIG.

Costs a bit more—but worth it

More exotic locales aren't beyond the reach of the average college student, with some careful budgeting and planning. If you don't have the money on hand for this year, save your pennies for next March.

Acapulco has been called the "playground of Mexico". Where else can you dance until 2 a.m. and spend the next day among ancient pyramids? The beaches are enticing to water-sports and sunbathing enthusiasts, and the diehard shopper can choose between sleek shopping plazas and traditional open-air markets. Cavalcade Tours offers a seductive package: Round-trip fare on American Airlines, three nights at the Posada del Sol, full breakfast, lunch and dinner, shuttles to spots of local interests, tennis, and free admission to the cities many discos (disco isn't dead in Acapulco). The cost is $499.00; for an additional $93.00 you can rent a VW sedan and have greater mobility. A comparable vacation put together a la carte would have a price tag of $560.00. Enjoy the sun, the late nights, and the spicy Mexican food, but don't drink the water; that includes ice in drinks. Bring along the Pepto just in case. Also bring along a passport or a birth certificate and photo ID; you'll need proof of citizenship.

When God had finished with the Garden of Eden, He created Bermuda. This small strip of land in the Atlantic is quite possibly the most beautiful and romantic location in the world. All of the cliches about a tropical island—sky-blue water, white sand beaches, balmy days—are embodied in Bermuda. Most of the buildings are white or pink stucco, and the many swimming pools are almost gratuitous, given the beauty of the beaches. For those not inclined to water sports or baking in the sun, the streets of Hamilton are a shoppers' paradise. Only residents are allowed to have cars, so tourists get around by cab or motor scooter. The Harmony Club offers a three-to-four day package including a double room, breakfast, tea, dinner, and unlimited beverages; use of the tennis courts, pool, whirlpool, sauna; free moped rental, and round trip airfare on USAir, Delta, PanAm, American Airlines, or Continental. The package cost is $894.00 out of Boston; tack on an additional $14.00 to go from JFK. You will need proof of citizenship.

If you think cruises are only for the idle rich, you haven't heard of Singleworld Tours. A price of $545.00 gets you a 4-night Bahamian cruise with all meals, and

Students studying abroad could become terrorist targets

By Alice Chaves
Contributing Editor

The biggest success in American education this year - the boom in foreign study programs - may be about to become its biggest nightmare. Some of the record 60,000 - 70,000 Americans planning to study abroad this year could become targets of terrorists in the Persian Gulf war.

Currently Sacred Heart University does not have a formal foreign study programs, yet in an attempt to give students a global education, the university does offer study tours. Scheduled for this academic year are international trips to Moscow, Morocco, Israel, Italy, Poland and England which are all being sponsored by education department's "Incredible Shrinking World" study tour program.

Yet as the Jan. 15 United Nations deadline for Iraq to withdraw its troops from Kuwait passed, students and university administrators began having questions about student safety. Their concerns have translated into some universities, including Sacred Heart, to cancel some of those very study tours.

Trips that were cancelled

There were eight students interested in participating in the Early Childhood Study Trip to Reggio, Emilia, Italy, scheduled for April 12-21, before the trip was cancelled. "Families of the students were putting pressure on them to cancel, but no student wanted to be the first to come forth and express concern over the possibility of a terrorist attack. When I finally made the decision to cancel, they were all extremely relieved," said Dr. Herman.

The Imperial Cities of Morocco Study Tour, scheduled for Feb. 9-16, and The Holy Land and Israel Seminar Trip, scheduled for Feb. 8-16, were immediately cancelled after the United States State Department issued a travel ban that stated it was not advisable to travel into Arabian countries at this critical time. According to Dr. Herman, trip organizer, "Although Israel is very pro U.S.A. in helping in the Gulf war, we made a determination that it was in the best interests of all parties to cancel."

Who decides to cancel

With most travel groups all the trip organizer has to do to get the deposit back on a particular trip is to cancel 30 days before departure. But who makes the final decision whether a group of students will get on a plane? In the case of the Moroccan trip, there were discussions with Dr. Richard Farmer, Dean of Graduate Studies; Dr. Edward Malin, education faculty chair; and Dr. Thomas Trebon, Provost and Vice President of Academic Affairs. Says Dr. Herman, "we were all under the same apprehensions of war and terrorism. They advised me to cancel, but left it up to my good judgement to make the final decision."

"The ultimate responsibility lies with the instructor - the organizer of the trip. I consulted with the faculty chair and several colleagues, but I made a decision to go to Russia and everyone respected my decision," said Dr. Willison.

What is still up in the air

As of now the study tours which have not been cancelled is the Second Annual Magic of Poland Study Tour scheduled for Aug. 11-19 and the Fifth Annual Summer Travel Seminar to England scheduled for June 30 - July 10. Last year the trip to England was cancelled due to the same scare of terrorism. "Students are worried about going to England. They are concerned about the Irish Republic Army and what they may do," remarked Dr. Herman.

Green light

The Third Annual Russian Odyssey Seminar Trip which was scheduled for Feb. 9-17 and arranged by education professors Dr. Scott Willison and Dr. Barry Herman was the only trip so far to get the green light. "Although we did find friendly people throughout our trip through Lennigrad, Minsk and Moscow, we did encounter tighter security and disagreeing viewpoints about the Gulf war," said Dr. Willison, but added, "so as a precaution, we did switch from PamAm to FinAir in order to avoid the possibility of a terrorist attack."

How area colleges feel

At Fairfield University there are 45 students studying abroad this semester, according to university officials. "They are scattered in England, France, Switzerland, Ireland and Scotland," said Nancy Habetz, a university spokesperson.

Although the study programs were given the go ahead, tour programs for the spring semester were cancelled. Those trips included an art discovery tour of Italy, summer camp in Italy and a summer workshop in Spain. "The university does not want to endanger the lives of students and plans to offer the tour programs sometime in the future," she added.

According to Janet Schor, Director of Multi-Cultural Relations at the University of Bridgeport, "As of right now, no trips have been cancelled. We still plan to have tour groups go to England, Italy and France."

UB will be the only area university not cancelling any international trips. When asked why the university is not apprehensive about the possible threat of terrorist attacks, Schor replied, "large universities are more likely to be targets than a small group coming from Bridgeport."

Harvard University was notified by the State Department that "the Harvard name would be a specific target" for war-related terrorist attacks and decided to bar Harvard student organizations, bands and sports teams from any future foreign travel, said Dean of Students Archie Epps in a recent article in the Bridgeport Post.

In an interview with the campus newspaper, The Harvard Crimson, Epps stated, "ordinarily we don't play such an active role in the affairs of student organizations, but this is an exceptional situation."

One school feels differently

"We are seeing a lot of concern on the part of students and parents," admitted Jeff Bliss, spokesman for Pepperdine University in California. "But, we're not seeing a drop in enrollment. In fact, all our programs are filled to capacity."

Although the university, along with those of six other U.S. universities with programs in Florence, Italy, received nearly identical letters threatening them with reprisal if the United States went to war with Iraq from the group calling itself "Secret Popular Revolutionary Movement", Bliss continues to see it business as usual. During orientation sessions, students traveling abroad are advised "not to stand out as Americans," but he notes "that's more as a courtesy to the host country than a security problem."

If the war was over tomorrow

If Saddam Hussein surrendered this minute and the Persian Gulf war was to end, would these trips still be a go? According to Dr. Willison, it all depends on student enrollment and certain social factors. "No matter if the war ended this week, there would be no trips to any countries to the Middle East."

"We can't let the current situation dictate to us. What we must be is cautious."

casinos, nightclubs, shops, and sports opportunities galore. The Nordic Princess makes 1-day ports in Nassau, Little Stirrup Cay, and Freeport—a great time for shopping, snorkeling, or just people-watching and soaking up local color. Singleworld caters to single people aged 18-35 with the goal of singles meeting other singles, but it prints a disclaimer in its brochure: "We are not a lonely hearts club, a dating service, or a matrimonial bureau." A $25.00 membership fee is required, as is a valid passport.

Neither is Paris out of reach for college students. Visitours, Inc.

offers an 8-day stay in Paris at the remarkably reasonable price of $795.00 per person. The price tag includes round-trip airfare on British Airways, a double-occupancy room at the Alexandra Hotel, daily continental breakfasts, and discount cards for local shops and restaurants. When you're viewing the Arc de Triomphe, the Eiffel Tower, and Notre Dame, don't neglect the smaller attractions along the Left Bank. Your greatest expenditure will be food, but it's easy to economize; patronize street-side cafes rather than four-star Michelin Guide specials, or put together a picnic at one of the many open-air markets. If you've dreamed of going to Paris in the spring, check this out.

If someone else is picking up the tab...

If you're graduating in May and think you can finagle a vacation as an early graduation present, or if you have the state lottery to back you up, go for one of these top-of-the-line destinations.

The Queen Elizabeth II is the Cadillac of cruises. This city at sea has four pools, a health spa, a 3,000-volume library, a cinema showing first-run movies, an International Shopping Promenade, casino, arcade, and a ton of organized sports and activities. It's fully possible to be busy every minute of the day, and equally possible to do nothing more strenuous than drink iced tea by a pool. Like most cruises, the piece de resistance is world-class food. The QEII sports four restaurants that serve three meals a day, a midmorning coffee and afternoon tea buffet is available on deck, exotic snacks at the bar, and, of course, the infamous midnight buffet. The ship docks in Charleston, Antigua, Martinique, and St. Thomas. If you have the funds, this is the way to go.

Step back into a more elegant era on the Orient Express. This luxury railroad experience shows off European gentility at its finest. The service is polite and considerate (for instance, they turn down your bedclothes at night and serve breakfast in bed on request), the decor is mid-nineteenth century, the table is set with cloth napkins and heavy silver, and the rooms are more comfortable than many hotel rooms. What does one do on such a journey? Converse with other passengers, read, write letters, or just watch the European countryside go by. The line states "You can never be overdressed on the Orient Express." Most passengers dress for dinner; given the surroundings, it's appropriate. One thing that is not old-fashioned about the Orient Express is the price. A London-Vienna round trip costs $3,530.00 per person, double occupancy, with all meals included. However, your air travel to London is your responsibility.

Club Med is a worldwide enterprise, with 110 villages in 30 countries. The prices are all-inclusive and tipping is not permitted, so there's no need to bother with carrying cash around. At Paradise Island in the Bahamas, the informal elegance of the village blends with the natural beauty for an unforgettable experience. The beaches are a haven for sun worshippers; for the sportspeople there is tennis, golf, windsurfing, sailing, snorkeling, swimming, aerobics, and volleyball; non-sports enthusiasts can choose between arts and crafts, dance or photography lessons, movies, and a full roster of other activities. World-class chefs cook three meals a day plus buffets, and the price contains food and unlimited wine. The young staff acts as host, instructor, entertainer, and friend. It's possible to be busy every minute of the day, and equally possible to do absolutely nothing. The cost of paradise is $1,455.00 a week, including airfare from New York. This is a vacation worth planning and saving for.

For the wild at heart...

Travel Alaska in the luxurious ULTRA DOME railway, with windows 138% larger than traditional windows, letting you better appreciate America's last frontier. You can navigate rivers, explore glaciers, fish, hike, or visit museums and deserted gold-rush towns. Mount McKinley presents an interesting challenge to hikers, while the more conservative can admire the wildlife in Dengali National Park. A twelve-day excursion on ULTRA DOME is $1,899, including accommodations and meals, but not airfare.

Kenya is a part of the rapidly disappearing wilderness that has managed to hold on to its natural beauty. Abercrombie and Kent of England offers a twelve day safari covering Aberdare National Park, Sambura National Reserve, Mt. Kenya, and other wildlife preserves. In addition to lions and tigers and bears (no bears, actually) you can expect to see elephants, rhinos, buffalo, hyenas, zebras, giraffes, lions, wildebeest, antelope, and over 300 species of birds. The $2,085.00 per person price includes all meals and accommodations, transportation, admission to all parks, and services of a guide. Airfare from New York is an additional $1,573.00. Depending on your tastes, you can spend your evenings in first-class hotels or under a canvas tent—just how rugged are you?

I hear that Israel is especially beautiful in the springtime, but we wouldn't advise it. Go where you can with your resources and imagination, and have a good time no matter where you spend your break.

Speiser to direct "A View from a Bridge"

By Chris Conway
A&E Editor

Sacred Heart University English professor Frank Speiser will hold open auditions on March 2-3 for a play he will direct, "A View from a Bridge". The Arthur Miller play will be performed April 18-21 and 25-27 in the Sacred Heart University Theatre.

The auditions, which will be held in the theatre, are open to the public, as well as university students.

Speiser, in his first year at Sacred Heart University where he teaches classes in communications and theatre, has an extensive background in theatre, television and films. A member of the Screen Actors Guild and Actors Equity, Speiser has appeared in films such as "Electric Horseman" and "The Rose".

In 1974, Speiser produced, wrote and starred in a one man show "The World of Lenny Bruce" which ran off-Broadway.

Speiser has wanted to do a production of "A View from a Bridge" since his days as a drama student at Yale University. It was at this time when a production of the play in which Speiser was cast as the lead fell through.

Now twenty five years later Speiser has an opportunity not only to direct the play but to finally play the lead role of Eddie Carbone.

Set in 1950's Brooklyn the story is about a man, Eddie Carbone, who along with his wife Beatrice and niece Catherine are harboring two illegal aliens. The rest of the play deals with the trouble and conflicts caused by these two visitors.

When asked why he wanted to produce "A View from a Bridge", Speiser said, "I know this story, I know this Neighborhood. As a kid I knew a lot of Eddie Carbone".

All performances of "A View from a Bridge" will begin at 8pm, with the exception of a 2pm matinee on Sunday April 21. The tickets for the play will cost $5 for students and $8 for the general public.

called to the stage. They were subjected to two minutes in front of each of the three comics.

Those able to persevere their straight face for six minutes won $25.00 cash and a "We Can Make You Laugh" T-shirt.

Three students walked away with the cash prize.

Others who were not so lucky, like Pete Yarasavich and Pilar Chira, cracked up losing the cash, but received T-shirts for being picked.

The first contestant and winner Kathleen "famished" Faherty was happy to receive the cash prize. She was impressed by the comedians' ability. She said, "I thought that they were very good."

Leticia Macia was able to keep a straight face while being tormented by the "Brill-Cream" antics of Andre Kelley.

"I was nervous during the show," said Macia. "I kept trying to concentrate on thoughts that wouldn't make me laugh."

When asked what she would do with her new found wealth Marcia said, "Treat my friends to eat."

Sophomore Scott Appleby commented on the event, "I thought that they were very funny....except for the midget (Carta)!"

Student judge Todd Ross enjoyed the show. "I thought it was hysterical, all of the contestants were great!"

Overall, students seemed to enjoy the show.

Sophomore Jodi Colluci said, "It was a great event! Everyone seemed to have a really good time!"

The third winning contestant Craig Reeves was nowhere to be found after the show. Perhaps Carta's reference to his "Eddie Munster Hairdo" was a bit too much for him.

Kiss Army invades Norwalk nightspot

By Paul Molnar

Area Kiss fans were treated to an unusual tribute to one of the most popular hard rock bands of the 70's. Kiss Army, a four man look, act, and sound-a-like band took the stage at The Monkey Bar in Norwalk, CT last Saturday night.

For the most part the show was pure Kiss. Mostly songs from the first three albums that were released in 1974 and 1975. The band actually didn't sound that bad, but it was a combination of their appearance, attitude, and the music that won the audience over.

The band members were dressed like the Kiss of the early 70's. The costumes and face makeup were almost identical to the real band and with the exact same style of instruments they were ready to please the cheering crowd. Most of the popular early Kiss songs like "Rock and Roll all Nite", "Strutter", and "Hotter than Hell" were done well, but it was some forgotten songs like "Strange Ways" and "Comin' Home" that surprised many of the fans.

Although these theatrics were simply borrowed from the old band it was a strong reminder of what Kiss used to be...

There were a few moments of the show that would stand out from the rest. The bass player, standing in front of a burning candlelabra imitated the Gene Simmons, blood spitting bass solo.

The band's lead singer/Paul Stanley stand in was quick to use some old anecdotes that Stanley used to amuse the crowd between songs. Although these theatrics were simply borrowed from the old band it was a strong reminder of what Kiss used to be and was an added treat for the crowd.

At the end of the show there seemed to be some crowd reaction to the advertisements that ran in area magazines. It was mentioned that a surprise special guest (possibly an original member of Kiss) but the fans would have no such luck of that happening.

Although the show wasn't Kiss, rather Kiss "clones", it was an enjoyable celebration of their music most of the audience wasn't disappointed.

Kiss Army had a tough act to follow considering that Kiss is celebrating 18 years in music, but it was a nice gesture to tribute the band and the music that they love so much.

Music industry names the year's best

By Paul Molnar

Last Wednesday night, in a three hour plus show, the best and the brightest stars in music gathered together for the 33rd Annual Grammy Awards. The presentation was held at Radio City Music Hall in New York City and was certain to be the highlight of the year as several musicians were honored.

Comedian Gary Shandling hosted the show and kept the audience amused between presentations and performances. Popular artists like Bette Midler, M.C. Hammer, Phil Collins, and even Tony Bennett pleased the audience with live performances of songs that they were nominated for.

Some artists were nominated several times, but none of them walked away big winners. Phil Collins, nominated eight times, received only one grammy award for record of the year "Another Day in Paradise." Mariah Carey seemed to be the surprise of the evening when she took the best new artist and best pop vocal female awards.

Other winners included Quincy Jones for his album of the year "Back on the Block," Bette Midler's "From a Distance" took the song of the year award and the late Roy Orbison was honored for best pop vocal male. M.C. Hammer received a grammy for best rap solo and Luther Vandross won in the R+B vocal category.

The rock awards were shared by newcomers and veterans as well. Eric Clapton won the rock vocal male award and Aerosmith and Living Colour were both honored for rock performances. Both bands provided electrifying performances during the awards presentation.

Throughout the broadcast several musicians received lifetime achievement honors. Actor Richard Gere presented one to the late John Lennon which was accepted by his wife Yoko Ono. Lennon was also honored by Tracy Chapman and Aerosmith who performed renditions of "Imagine" and "Come Together." Another actor, Jack Nicholson presented a lifetime award to singer/songwriter Bob Dylan, who also performed on the show.

Even though most of these awards shows tend to drag out and get boring, this year's Grammy Awards had some good performances and no one artist monopolized the show. It was nice to see some veteran acts receive awards as well as the rising new artists. I'm sure we will be seeing most of the recipients again at next year's show.

Bullwinkle makes it big on video

By Catherine Gingerella

"Hey Rocky! Watch me pull a rabbit out of a hat!" These words, once only a fond memory of the past, are now forever immortalized on the new video series "The Adventures of Rocky and Bullwinkle."

Bullwinkle and friends, once a popular television cartoon from the 50's and 60's, has not been on the air in years, and until recently, has only been able to be seen in theatres such as the Sono Cinema in South Norwalk, and occasional early morning T.V. programming. Now Buena Vista Home Video has released a six volume series of the hilarious antics of Bullwinkle J. Moose and Rocky J. Squirrel.

For those fans who recall the show, Bullwinkle and Rocky are frequently accompanied on the show by a clan of wacky and wild characters including: Dudley Do'Right and Snidely Whiplash, Boris and Natasha and in the infamous and legendary Mr. Peabody and his pet boy Sherman.

Along with the continuing soap-operaesque serial adventure of the moose and squirrel are the other regular skits including "Fractured Fairy Tales," "Peabody's Improbable History" and "The Adventures of Dudley Do-Right."

The six videos, which range from 39 to 48 minutes each, explore the favorite adventures of the beloved moose and can be viewed for only $12.99 per video. The series includes: "Mona Moose," "Birth of Bullwinkle," "Vincent Van Moose," "Blue Moose," "La Grande Moose," and "Canadien Gothic." The good news is that because these videos are considered children's videos, they can be rented for less than the regular films rates.

Whether you rent these classics for your own children, or see them yourselves as a part of your childhood nostalgia, "The Adventures of Rocky and Bullwinkle" are to be loved by all, young and old.

Sculpture returns to SHU

at a commuter parking lot off Exit 13 on Route 8 in Shelton. An anonymous telephone tip to the Fairfield Police Department led to the recovery of that piece.

"Early Spring," which was recovered Monday, measures 78 by 68 inches and is 4 1/2 feet tall. When found, it was sitting upright, but on an angle because of the inclined path and soft ground it rested upon.

"We are all relieved and delighted that the works of Lee Tribe have been recovered," said Sophia Gevas, curator of The Gallery of Contemporary Art. "Though the works had been assessed monetary value, their value to the artist is incalculable. The time spent acquiring materials for such sophisticated welded metal pieces and the act of conceptualizing the metal into "living" pieces of sculpture make the final work of art invaluable. To an artist, it is one thing to sell a work of art or loan it to a museum, but to have its fate unknown—well that is abominable."

Speaking for the Sacred Heart University Security Department, Daoia said, "The mood of the University is euphoric over the recovery of "Early Spring", the second of two Lee Tribe sculptures that disappeared from the campus Monday, Feb. 18. Through the cooperative efforts of the Fairfield, Shelton, and Bridgeport Police Departments we were able to recover both pieces in a timely manner.

"But the matter does not end with the recovery of these sculptures. It is important to stress that there is an ongoing investigation to identify the person or persons responsible for the disappearance of these pieces from our gallery courtyard."

According to the university spokesperson, Virginia Apple, the sculptures will be secured on campus until the artist comes to collect them. "Since the show ends March 7, they most likely will not be shown again," she stated.

LOSE 20 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS!

Famous U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet

During the non-snow off season the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team members used the "Ski Team" diet to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. That's right—20 pounds in 14 days! The basis of the diet is chemical food action and was devised by a famous Colorado physician especially for the U.S. Ski Team. Normal energy is maintained (very important!) while reducing. You keep "full"—no starvation—because the diet is designed that way. It's a diet that is easy to follow whether you work, travel or stay at home.

This is, honestly, a fantastically successful diet. If it weren't, the U.S. Women's Ski Team wouldn't be permitted to use it! Right? So, give yourself the same break the U.S. Ski Team gets. Baseball takes aim at World Series

By Rick Ferris
Sports Editor

Coming off a 30-15 season (11-3, second place in the NECC) and setting school records for wins in a season, one could ask, what next?

After coming within one game of the college World Series last spring, the Sacred Heart baseball team looks to go that one extra step this season.

Senior co-captain Pete Yarasavich echoed those goals. "Our goal is to win the conference and take it one step further than last year and make it to the world series."

Yarasavich admitted that hard work is needed to accomplish this goal. "We have to keep working hard like we have been. We have to do the little extra things both in the games and in practice that makes you a championship ball club."

Yarasavich will be the first baseman for the Pioneers taking over for departed Dave Garthwait. Yarasavich garnered second-team All-NECC honors as a junior last season batting .328 with nine doubles and 16 RBI. At second base will be sophomore Scott Schilling. Scott batted .262 as a frosh, but came on to bat .385 last fall and showed that he could hit with some power with two home runs.

Junior Dan Martin and freshman Marc Durland are the leading candidates for the short-stop position while junior Al Carrara will anchor third.

Romeo led the team in the fall with a .415 batting average and along with Yarasavich, Schilling, Carrara, and Bruno can supply punch to the Pioneer lineup.

The strength of the team is expected to come from the pitching staff. All-America pitcher and co-captain Rich Licursi heads a squad which also features junior college All-America Mike Bennett who has recovered from elbow surgery and should along with Licursi supply a strong one-two punch. Licursi finished a stellar junior campaign with a 13-2 record with a 2.81 era. Bennett was 11-0 his junior season at Housatonic Community College and 4-0 with a 0.84 era last fall.

Rounding out the staff is junior Tim Ward, who contributed heavily to the 1989 and 1990 staffs, Carrara, and Nagy.

Licursi also has high hopes for the 91 squad. "We have to establish a good defensive team and to let each player know his role." Licursi went on to say, "We have to make Sacred Heart a dominant force in all situations. Productive hitting and good pitching will allow us to appear in the national tournament. But before we can think of that, we must know who we are first."

Third year coach Nick Giaquinto concurs, "I expect to be competitive in our conference. I also expect to have a team that plays hard every game, a team that plays with enthusiasm, and a team that is fun to watch."

Major obstacles to Pioneer successes will once again come from the University of New Haven, as well as the University of Lowell. The Chargers from New Haven have consistently for years been representing the northeast in the college world series, and should have a good shot to once again with senior Nick Spoveiro, and junior Mike Stober heading a strong pitching staff.

The Chargers defeated Sacred Heart in the "if" game of the NCAA regionals last year 3-1 behind the pitching of Spoveiro, who also pitched a complete game shutout versus the Pioneers the day before.

Licursi concluded, "The will to win is nothing unless you have the will to prepare."

Arch-rival Knights fall to Lady Cagers

With time running out in the game, sophomore Kim Filia steps to the line to shoot a technical foul and increase the Lady Pioneers' lead over UB. For more information, see story.

Saturday night, the Lady Pioneers pulled another surprise out of their hats by defeating arch-rival Bridgeport 65-61.

Diane Nicholls tied the game at 60 with a basket and put them ahead 62-60 for good with a pair of free throws. After falling behind 46-39, their biggest deficit of the game, the Lady Pioneers rallied back with the help of sophomore Kim Filia's 20 points, and junior Elaine Agosti's 10 points and five assists. Nicholls had 13 points and 13 rebounds, while junior Alethia Osbourne added 12 points and 10 rebounds.

The victory also gave the Pioneers their most league victories since the 1983-84 season, and their most victories since the 1985-86 season.

Junior Jennifer Dankulich said of the victory, "we have been striving for a long time to beat them. Beating them was long overdue. Of the teams in the conference, New Haven and Bridgeport were the teams we wanted to beat the most and we beat them both." Dankulich continued, "They weren't ready. They were expecting us to lie down, but we came back to show them."

Bridgeport coach Dave Hennessey was Sacred Heart's head coach Ed Swanson's high school and grammar school coach, so the win meant something extra to Swanson. "Dave is a great guy, he's been my friend for years. It always feels good to beat someone who coached you. But I want to make it clear that I didn't beat Dave, the Sacred Heart women beat Bridgeport's women."

On Wednesday, the Lady Pioneers traveled to Rindge, New Hampshire to take on the Franklin Pierce Ravens. The Ladies came up short 62-55. Sacred Heart led 33-29 at the half, but the Ravens, who finished the regular season with a 9-5 league record good for second place, came back for the victory.

Agosti led the Lady Pioneers with 16 points and five assists, while Osbourne added 11 points and 11 rebounds. Karen Bell and Filia each scored nine points and Nicholls added eight.

LADY PIONEER NOTES: The Lady Pioneers played the first round of the NECC tournament Tuesday night against those same Franklin Pierce Ravens. If Sacred Heart won the game, they would play tomorrow night with the opponent and time announced in the local papers.

Bridgeport Men down Sacred Heart 84-70

By Amy Madison
Sports Reporter

As post season play nears, the Sacred Heart Men's Basketball team finds itself on the low end of the NECC totem pole. The Heart finished the regular season at 10-17 overall and 6-8 in the NECC, possessing the worst season in Pioneer basketball history.

In front of an over-packed crowd at the SHU Box last Saturday, the University of Bridgeport handed the Pioneers an 84-70 defeat. Led by Lambert Shell, who finished with 36 points, the Purple Knights exploded in the second half, while the Pioneers deflated, to turn a 49-49 tie into a 64-49 UB advantage.

The Heart played well in the first half, taking a 31-24 lead at the 6:18 mark on a three-pointer by Darrin Robinson and holding a 38-36 halftime advantage. The second half remained close for the first seven minutes, but the Pioneers allowed UB to go on a 15-0 run and were not able to recover.

Robinson, who finished with 27 points, was held to nine points in the second half by Bridgeport's aggressive defense. The Knights took advantage of SHU's scoring drought in the second half and repeatedly executed the fast break with perfection as they have been known to in the past. Senior Todd Williams completed his final game at the SHU Box with 17 points and 10 rebounds as did fellow senior Rob Dubose, who added 14 points and 10 rebounds and avoided fouling out even after receiving his fourth foul early in the second half.

"We would have had to play a near-perfect game to beat them," admitted Head Coach Dave Bike.

"We didn't have the horses to beat them tonight." Earlier in the season, the Pioneers did have the "horses" to beat the Knights 83-77 at the UB gym.

Prior to the UB game, the Pioneers suffered an 86-65 loss to first-place Franklin Pierce in Rindge, New Hampshire. The Heart held the lead for much of the first half, but they fell behind 40-32 at halftime and fell apart in the second half. Dubose led the Pioneers with 17 points and nine boards, while Williams added 16 points and nine rebounds and Robinson had 14 points. Tom Mair paced the Ravens with 31 points.

The Pioneers have proven that they have the ability to triumph over difficult teams. During the four-game winning streak over Lowell, UB, New Hampshire, and New Haven, the Heart played as a team with determination and strong defense, which led to a well executed offense.

This past month, the Pioneers were victorious in only one of their seven games, squandering 15 and 18 point leads and playing mediocre defense and a "catch-up" style game.

Li Poeng sets Ricardo Cuevas with an opportunity for a kill in action against New Paltz College. Our men dropped the contest as they continue struggling under the first year coaching of Steve Fordyce. The last Pioneer Spiker's homegame is this evening, Feb. 28, so come on out and support the team.
